Eeeeeee Numb. 1869.

The Daily Courant.

Friday, March 19. 1714.

From the Paris Gazette, dated March 17.

Naples, February 13.

THE four Deputations held an Assembly the 12th of this Month, to deliberate upon divers Means propused for the Advantage of the Commerce of this City and Kingdom. The Merchants to whom the Result of those Deliberations was communicated, have been ordered to prepare their Memorials, and offer their Counsels, upon which a final Resolution may be taken and sent to Vienna.

From the Paris Gazette, dated March 24.

Naples, Feb. 20. According to the last Letters from Reggio in Calabria, the Governour had caused Proclamation to be made of Freedom of Commerce with Sicily, upon the Hopes entertained of the near Conclusion of a general Peace: and this Permission has occasioned great Joy in the Country, the People hoping by this Means to dispose of their Products and Manufactures with Advantage. We learn by the same Letters, that the King of Sicily was to set out from Palermo in a few Days, to go to visit the principal Towns and Fortresses of the Kingdom, and that the 30th of March was fixed for his publick Entry into Messina. He has sent Order to all the Governours of maritime Places, not to let any Ecclesiastick Secular or Regular imbark without express Permission, because there were a great Number of them who were desirous to retire, on Account of the Contests there are with those who think themselves obliged to pay Obedience to the Sentences of Interdict denounced by some Bishops and confirmed at Rome, and who will not administer divine Service in the Churches opened by Order of the Tribunal of the Monarchy.

Rome, Feb. 24. To Day the Pope gave Audience to the Archbishop of Messina. 'Twas thought that after the Permission which the King of Sicily had granted him to return to his Church, and to exercise his Functions without any hindrance, he would have gone back immediately, and this gave ground to believe that the Differences about the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction might be amicably terminated. He communicated the Letters which had been written to him on that Subject; and after they had been examined in the Congregation of the Immunity, he was ordered not to have any Communication with those who have not observed the Interdict, and to treat them as Persons who have incurred the Censures. Whereupon this Prelate foreseeing that his Return would serve only to excite new Troubles, has thought fit to stay here.

From the Paris Letter, dated March 24.

Paris, March 24. The Letters from Perpignan tell us, that the Count de Fiennes continued encamped towards St. Feliou, and had caused Possession to be taken of all the Passages of the Mountains towards Vich, Urgel, and Barcelona, in order to keep open the Communication of the Lampourdan with those Places, and particularly with the Camp before Barcelona. 'Tis advised from Girone the 9th, that the Count de Fiennes having Intelligence that Berga was straitned by a Body of Rebels, caused M. de Fimarcon to march thither speedily with a strong Detachment, who after having put the Rebels to Flight, put into the Place a Supply of Corn and Cattle; then he marched to Urgel, which was likewise hard pressed by a Body of Rebels, whom he dispersed, and then re-victualled the Place with necessary Provisions. He was no sooner gone from Berga but the Marquis de Thouy came thither likewise, and put into it a Supply of Meal and Money which he had designed for Solsona; whither he marched afterwards, and dispersed a Troop of Rebels who infested that Part of the Country. M. de Valouse whom the Duke de Popoli had sent towards Blanes and Oftalric, had likewise re-victualled those two Places, and re-established the Communication along the Coast with the Lampourdan. Other Advices from Catalonia, which came by the Way of Madrid, add, that Brigadier Gonzalez having Intelligence that there was a Body of Rebels at Pallar and at St. Estevan, marched suddenly and fell upon them, killed 150 of them and took several Prisoners; and that the Count de Montemar, after having relieved Manresa which was invested by a Troop of Rebels, was marched in Pursuit of them. Letters from Strasbourg of the 16th give an Account, that since the Signing of the Peace several German Officers were come thither in order to go on to Paris, among others the Son of Count Guido Staremberg; and that publick Prayers were made there, for beseeching God to put a stop to the contagious Distempers which still raged in some Parts of Germany, least it should spread to this Side of the Rhine by means of the Commerce which is about to be opened with Germany.
